Our specialists offer insight, innovative thinking and expert advice to create great places for future generations.

No-one is better at coming up with new ideas, and new ways to plan and manage the country's biggest development projects. We're always looking for a better way – for every client, and for every project. It's what we do. And what makes us stand out.

With over two hundred people operating from eight offices across the UK, we combine local contacts with the know-how to deal with every kind of project, large or small.

We're independent and staff owned, and we're proud of it. Everyone here has a stake in the business, and they're deeply committed to everything they do. Whoever you need to talk to, you'll work with the industry's brightest talent.

Publishing market intelligence

We are at the forefront of market analysis and we track government policy and legislation so we can give fresh insight to our clients. Our Think Tank is a catalyst for industry-leading thinking on planning and development.

The Lichfields perspective

What makes us different? We're not just independent but independent-minded. We're always prepared to take a view. But we always do that for the right reasons – we want to help our clients make the best possible decisions.

We have an energetic entrepreneurial culture that means we can respond quickly and intelligently to change, and our distinctive collaborative approach brings together all the different disciplines to work faster, smarter, and harder on our clients' behalf.

Keeping you up to date

Everyone in the company is encouraged to contribute to our award-winning blog, giving a fresh perspective on the latest news and trends in planning.

Creating great places since 1962

We've been at the forefront of planning and development in the UK since the company was founded. And now, half a century later, we're the most successful consultancy in the industry.

Working as one company

We work collaboratively, sharing skills and insight nationwide to benefit our clients.

We attract exceptional talent: people who share our passion to help organisations tackle the challenges they face, and deliver great results. Our reputation is built on the skills and knowledge of the individuals we employ. That's why we make sure Lichfields is a company that people want to join, and a working environment where they can grow.

We're independent and employee-owned. It's part of what makes us special.
